

NEOLIBERAL URBANISM

A Symposium

April 27th and 28th at UIC

Just as neoliberal policy has conditioned a wide range of urban transformations since the 1970s, cities themselves have provided essential sites for the ongoing construction—and contestation—of neoliberalism as a political project.

To mark the ten-year anniversary of the path-breaking volume Spaces of Neoliberalism, which grew out of a conference at UIC to influence a broad program of scholarship, please join us to revisit the evolving times and spaces of neoliberal urbanism. The book's editors and contributors will join scholars from other fields to present their own work and to reflect on a decade of research.
