“Digitize and Punish is pathbreaking. It is an example of what interdisciplinary training and spatial thinking should be.”

—Rashad Shabazz,
author of Spatializing Blackness

Digitize and Punish

Racial Criminalization in the Digital Age

BRIAN JEFFERSON

Brian Jefferson explores the history of digital computing and criminal justice, revealing how big tech, computer scientists, university researchers, and state actors have digitized carceral governance over the past forty years. He shows how digital technology has expanded the wars on crime and drugs, enabling our current state of mass incarceration and further entrenching the nation's racialized policing and punishment.

“One of the most important and urgent books about forced migration ever written.”

—Michael Collyer, University of Sussex

The Death of Asylum

Hidden Geographies of the Enforcement Archipelago

ALISON MOUNTZ

Alison Mountz traces the global chain of remote detention centers used by states of the Global North to confine migrants fleeing violence and poverty, using cruel measures that, if unchecked, will lead to the death of asylum as an ethical ideal. By focusing on borderlands and spaces of transit between regions, The Death of Asylum shows how remote sites curtail the basic human right to seek asylum, forcing refugees to take more dangerous risks.

“Groundbreaking . . . offers a new understanding of how most Americans became modern.”

—Alison K. Hoagland, author of Mine Towns

How the Working-Class Home Became Modern, 1900–1940

THOMAS C. HUBKA

At the turn of the nineteenth century, the average American family still lived by kerosene light, ate in the kitchen, and used an outhouse. By 1940, electric lights, dining rooms, and bathrooms were the norm as the traditional working-class home was fast becoming modern. Thomas C. Hubka revises our understanding of how widespread domestic improvement transformed the lives of Americans.

—Jonathan Xavier Inda,
author of Racial Prescriptions

Deadly Biocultures

The Ethics of Life-Making

NADINE EHLERS AND SHILOH KRUPAR

Deadly Biocultures examines the affirmation to hope, target, thrive, secure, and green in the respective biocultures of cancer, race-based health, fatness, aging, and the afterlife. Its chapters focus on specific practices, technologies, or techniques that ostensibly affirm life and suggest life's inextricable links to capital but that also engender a politics of death and erasure.

Red Gold

The Managed Extinction of the Giant Bluefin Tuna

JENNIFER E. TELESCA

Red Gold offers unparalleled access to the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas, showing that the institution has faithfully executed the task assigned it by international law: to fish as hard as possible to grow national economies. ICCAT manages the bluefin not to protect them but to secure export markets for commodity empires—and is complicit in their extermination.
